

Diann's Happy Tails Newsletter for Nov. 2011

In this issue:

Daycare specialsPet Food specials Last Obedience Class on Nov 5th.

Thanks to everyone for all the kind words & thoughts on the yellow lab story.

It is one of the hardest things to write about and never easy.

I know it was upsetting, but if it can help one dog, it's worth it.

As expected, I got many mixed reactions, and to some I came out the "Bad guy" meaning some feel that should do whatever they want with their own dog.

True in a way, but I feel safety should come first.

Can't please everyone, but if saves one, that is my goal.

Many that did not know it was not legal. Some of you admitted to doing it quite often, with the thought that dog's just are meant to do that. BUT,

Thankfully they will stop.

The owner of the dog was located, but in what I assume was pure shame, wouldn't admit to even having a dog. I'll let it go at that and say thank you all for your support and my friend is grateful also.

*if you get confused about all the dog food information, you are not alone.
Sometimes the more we read about something, the worse it gets. I know. I've been doing it for over 2 years. Having a dog with tummies problems, meat protein issues, ear infections, I have spent many hours checking out dog* *food. Below are a few links to sites that may help, if nothing else, they are fun to read and there is always something to learn:

And remember: if you don't see your favorite pet food above, doesn't mean I don't have it. the same favorites are still available. Have a request for a certain brand you haven't seen? Let me know. Chances are I can get it.*
